

I Forgive You

In I Forgive You, a story loosely based on the authors own life experiences in relationships, the characters all deal with heartache, betrayal, confusion and a sense of loneliness. In all of the mayhem, the main character, Jordan realizes that a closer relationship with God allows her to see things clearer and recognize what she is doing is killing her soul. After suffering from the abuse of her husband for many years, she befriends her boss, Dilan. The two develop a platonic relationship. He listened to her, spent time with her and simply gave her all the things she desired in her own marriage. Before long, Jordan and Dilan crossed the line in their relationship and began an intense romantic affair for several years. However, before the romance, Jordan had plans to leave her husband, Tevin. Dilan was also married but was not exactly upfront about his relationship with his wife. He was a very slick, conniving, dishonest and unfaithful man; yet, he had this charm about him that swept Jordan off her feet. Jordan struggles in making the decision to walk away for good. Things drastically change for Jordan as an unlikely friendship develops; secrets and more surprises are revealed. Through it all, they each learn their own lessons of forgiveness.
