Not illustrated. 1899 Excerpt: ...Block 10 appears to cover an enormous area, but at this time it was easily navigated; Brean is isolated by the intervening mass of Brent, block 9. DISTRICT IX. District IX contains the hundreds of Ringoltdeswea and Locheslei (now united as Whitley), North Petherton, and Andersfield, together with the independent manors of Monkton, Creech St. Michael, and Ham. It also includes Cossington, which Eyton considered to be in Bempstone at this date. It was in Whitley 1242 A.d. (S. R. S., xi, p. 256). I have omitted Pury Furneaux, containing four hides or thereabouts, and placed it for the nonce in District XII, block 1 (see notes on that block). The total in this District is 197h., 2v., 2f.; but the deficiency in the four blocks on the western side adjoining District XII is only 1 virg. 2 fert., which is almost exactly balanced by the overplus of 1 virg. 1? fert. in that district. The deficit is therefore on the eastern side of the district. Now Ringoltdeswea hundred contains fifty-nine hides, one hide short; and curiously enough block 4, containing Ham seventeen, Sowi twelve, and Shapwick thirty, works out at fifty-nine hides, also one hide short; and this deficiency of Vol. XL V (Third Series, Vol. V), Part I J. two hides practically balances the overplus of one-and-threequarter hides in District VIII. This equation, however, depends on the omission of Stawell two-and-half hides. As I have already stated in the notes on District VIII, this entry is probably subsidiary to, and redundant of, the entry relating to the thirty hides of Shapwick. Its omission would reduce the total of Locheslei hundred from fifty hides and a half to forty-eight hides, as compared with forty-seven hides given in the Geld Inquest; but too much stress must not be laid on this appear...
